

M<sup>a</sup> CARMEN VILLARAN

María Carmen Villaran Velasco, Ph.D. in Chemistry, from the University of Basque Country (Spain). She is the Director of Bioprocesses Area in Fundacion TECNALIA Research & Innovation, a Technological Centre placed in the North of Spain. She has more than 25 years' expertise in developing and management of R&D projects at national and international level related with the development of drying and dehydration processes for food industry and the development of processes for food ingredients development and their stabilization by drying and encapsulation technologies. Since 2002 she is member of the Bioencapsulation Research Group. She is inventor in two international patents. She has collaborated in more than 55 projects subsidized by public organism at national and international level and more than 50 contracts with private companies. She has more than 30 contributions to congresses and 31 papers in national and international journals. She has guided two Ph.Ds. and at the moment is the co-director in other two.

